SPRING 2021

Community Banks Strengthen Local Economies

2020 is now in our rear-view mirror and we are excited to be moving forward. Warmer days are here, and a sense of optimism is returning. April is Community Banking Month. Community banks are worth celebrating. The continued strength and vitality of community banks was essential in bolstering local economies. Community banks provided access to stimulus payments and processed a majority of the Paycheck Protection Program loans to small businesses. At Lake Elmo Bank, we processed PPP loans to help nearly 500 businesses in our community.

At Lake Elmo Bank, we are proud of our commitment to our local community. As a locally-owned and operated bank, we reinvest deposits back in the community through consumer loans, residential mortgages, and small business loans. Our deep commitment to our community is also reflected in our corporate giving. In 2020, we donated $55,000 to local nonprofit organizations. In addition to financial grants, we also invest through our human resources. Many of our 100+ employees volunteer either through LEB-sponsored events or as volunteer board members.

Not only do we support the community, but the community supports us by trusting LEB with their banking relationships. On page 2, you will find an example of a local business who we are proud to have worked with over the years. Because of loyal customers like you, we have grown to a size where we are able to provide the most up-to-date technology and digital banking products so that you are able to bank in whatever manner is most convenient for you.

Strong communities translate into strong, local economies. We are happy to be at the heart of improving the financial health of our customers and communities.

As always, thank you for your business.

President / CEO

Community Commitment...

Banking for Community Businesses Maroney's Sanitation, Inc.

In 1966, Joe Maroney left his manufacturing job at Honeywell and purchased a truck and a few small garbage routes in Minneapolis. After building their home in Stillwater, he and his wife, Adrienne worked to expand their family business to include both residential and commercial routes throughout Washington County, spanning from Hugo/Marine area down through Woodbury.

In the late 1980s, their three sons – Mike, Tim and Tom joined the business full-time, after working many summers driving trucks. In addition, the brothers formed TMT Recycling and became the first company to offer curbside collection of recycling.

The second-generation Maroneys have remained in the Stillwater community, raising their families and continuing to operate their family business, which now includes 14 employees and 10 trucks running routes daily throughout Washington County.

When asked about their banking relationship - "My Dad didn't always bank at Lake Elmo, but as we continued to grow - we found the big banks were getting increasingly difficult to work with. Lake Elmo Bank understands our business and they work with us based on our relationship. They make it easy," says Mike Maroney.

Tim, Mike and Tom Maroney

Similar to LEB, Maroney's offers the same level of personal service to their customers. Most recently they received a call from a panicked woman whose husband mistakenly tossed a large bag full of masks she had been making to donate during the pandemic. "My brother Tim climbed in the back of the truck and recovered the masks – undamaged," says Mike.

How has the pandemic affected their business? As an essential service provider, Maroney's business continued to work throughout the pandemic. "Our staff was really touched by the increase in children home during the day and the interest they had in our garbage trucks. Kids would wave from their windows, use sidewalk chalk to write messages in the driveway and tape thoughtful notes to their garbage cans thanking us for our service," says Mike.

At Lake Elmo Bank, we are committed to supporting small community businesses succeed. We thank Maroney's for trusting us with their banking needs throughout the years. And we thank you for your service during the pandemic.

Supporting Local Businesses During Pandemic

LEB Treats Staff to Fun Food Fridays

The pandemic was difficult on many of our small businesses. With closures, restrictions, etc. our small businesses worked hard to make ends meet. Our restaurants got creative with outdoor seating and many ramped up their take-out meal service. At Lake Elmo Bank we planned Fun Food Fridays – employees ordered lunch in from community restaurants, and we even hosted a food truck in our parking lot while LEB picked up the tab for staff. Fun for our employees and good support for our local restaurants.

Employees Receive Holiday Gift

With the pandemic, there was no holiday party for employees to celebrate the holidays. Instead, Lake Elmo Bank gave each employee $200 to purchase gift cards from local restaurants and establishments. LEB purchased just under $12,000 in gift cards – great holiday gift for employees while supporting our local businesses.

Paycheck Protection Program (PPP) and More

As a community bank, we helped nearly 500 businesses with Paycheck Protection Program (PPP) loans during the pandemic. We continue to be committed to our community businesses, and we are here to help with all your business banking needs.

Maximize Your IRA Investment

Have you caught up on your IRA contributions for 2020? Don't miss the opportunity to make the most of your savings plan. The maximum amount a person can contribute to a Traditional or Roth IRA for 2020 is $6,000. Those age 50 and older can add an extra $1,000 as a "catch-up" contribution, bringing the maximum annual IRA contribution to $7,000. All 2020 contributions must be made by April 15, 2021. There are income limitations that reduce or eliminate these amounts, making it important to look at your personal situation and get good tax advice.

Why Working With A Trust Department Can Be Helpful

One of the advantages of working with a Trust Department is professional management of your assets. We construct portfolios that are diversified with a goal to reduce overall portfolio risk and seek to enhance long-term performance. As a fiduciary we have an obligation to invest in a prudent manner with the client's best interest in mind.

As a professional manager, we have systems and processes in place to select and monitor investments. We have a very disciplined approach to managing the money in our care. Yet with all of this, we pride ourselves in being available to you. Building not only portfolios, but relationships.

Why LEB?

At Lake Elmo Bank, our customers are people – with names and families, not a number.

Favorite Part of the Day:

I enjoy helping customers get logged into their online/mobile banking and showing them all that it has to offer. I also enjoy learning something new, which allows me to better help my customers.

Personal Interests and Activities:

My husband and I live in New Richmond with our 5-year old daughter, 2 dogs, 2 cats and 17 chickens. Away from LEB, I enjoy reading, crocheting, archery, fishing and hunting.

I have a passion for ghost hunting.

One Word to Describe LEB:

Community.
